

scenes of the Revolution and the
of war, is entitled to the profound ration of us all. Against pressu in the large colonial towns, wh were freely made by the emissar where predictions of anarchy and poured forth by the timid and m temptations held out by the classes, and threats hurled at powerful of the royalists, these men and those noble women w

Mr. Dodge comes from this in which conscience seems to ha as intelligence, and in which th

